The Training and Skills Commission (TASC) provides independent, strategic advice on how South Australia can invest in a sustainable and highly skilled workforce. The TASC website aims to communicate the policy and legislative roles of the Commission, provide member login and information about the Training and Skills Development Act and Five Year Plan.

As a prequalified ICT supplier on the South Australian Government eProjects Panel and current trusted provider to the Department of State Development, The Digital Embassy was approached for the redevelopment of the TASC website and provide ongoing maintenance, upgrades and training for their DNN powered site.

The TASC website project was able to meet all project requirements in terms of design, user experience, accessibility, easy of editor publishing functionality and the successful update of the DNN ASP.NET CMS platform. The website project was delivered on time and within budget, benefiting greatly from having a clearly defined scope. This assisted with achieving all specification and deliverable requirements, while facilitating strong stakeholder engagement throughout the project. Upon the conclusion of the project, TASC reported that The Digital Embassy had been easy to work with and exceeded their expectations.
