WorkReady is a South Australian government initiative designed to change the way vocational education and training is funded in South Australia. A key component to this initiative is a newly launched website providing a gateway to information, connecting training providers with trainees.

The WorkReady website was developed to replace 7-8 existing sites which saw The Digital Embassy™, in-conjunction with Department of State Development (DSD), deliver a fully functional, consolidated website solution in less than five weeks.

The ability to meet this ambitious timeframe required strong consultation between stakeholders and a focus on the end objectives. The Digital Embassy's intimate understanding of web development technologies and project management meant that the project was delivered on time and budget, meeting the functional requirements defined by DSD.

The first integration of WorkReady (Skills for All) website was launched in 2012 and has undergone several upgrades to its interface and architecture.

The Digital Embassy™ has enjoyed an extended digital partnership and relationship with DSD which continues today (2017).
